Community Planning in the Eastern Neighborhoods
Rezoning Options Workbook
Draft

San Francisco Planning Department
February 2003
Table of Contents

Introduction

1. Citywide Land Use Context
   Housing as a Priority
     Housing Production and Affordability
     Land Use Conflicts
     Land Supply for Housing

   Production Distribution and Repair Activities: Use of Space and Land
     The Makeup of Production, Distribution, and Repair Activities
       Light PDR
       Medium PDR
       Core PDR

     Location and Distribution of PDR Activities
     Land Available for Core and Medium PDR in 2000

   Growth 2000-2025: Where Can We House People?
   Where and What Kind of Jobs Can We Accommodate?
     Household and Job Growth Allocation by Major Areas: Three Choices
     2025 Housing and Job Allocation Citywide
     PDR Job Growth and Land Available by 2025

2. Community Planning Process and Goals
   Zoning Designations
   Key Community Concerns
   Zoning Districts
   Zoning Districts Tables

   Zoning Options by Community Planning Area
     Bayview - Hunters Point
     Description
       Option A: Low Housing Option
       Option B: Moderate Housing Option
       Option C: High Housing Option
     Community Goals Table
     Zoning Maps
     Form Analysis (Height)
     Zoning Options Assessment Table
Introduction

Land in San Francisco is a very valuable commodity because of the City's fixed boundaries. Land prices reflect scarcity in a city with no place to expand. Competition for how the City's land is used can be quite intense. San Francisco is also a very attractive place to live and work. The quality of life here adds value, tangible and intangible. San Francisco's appeal as a place, however, could be enhanced or diminished by future spatial, social, and economic changes. The City needs to accommodate population growth and ensure adequate housing for the future San Francisco workforce. It needs to provide space for economic growth. It also needs to grow and change in ways that maintain the qualities that make it an attractive place to live and work.

The Planning Department creates and enforces policies and zoning controls to guide development towards the long-term interests of San Franciscans. However, short-term needs and pressures sometimes lead to measures that overlook and impair the long-term vision. The Planning Department must ensure that short-term interests do not compromise the vision of the City as a place, and that the public good is not relinquished to individual gain.

Recent dramatic changes in the City's industrial lands led to controversy as production, distribution and repair (PDR) businesses and lower-income residents increasingly clashed with or were displaced by dot-com uses and live/work loft development. These conflicts led to the City's imposition of temporary zoning controls and later the launching of a community planning process in the Eastern Neighborhoods to identify appropriate locations for housing and to determine the amount and location of industrial lands necessary for San Francisco's continuing role as an economic hub and employment center of the region.

Residents, businesses, developers, and organizations in the four community planning areas of the Eastern Neighborhoods -- Bayview Hunter's Point, Showplace Square / Potrero Hill, Mission, and SoMa- have expressed a wide range of preferences and concerns about the future use of land. This community input is the basis for preliminary zoning options presented in this report, which will inform the discussions about new zoning controls in these neighborhoods, guide the development of the Eastern Neighborhoods and influence the overall shape of San Francisco.